Hello everybody and welcome to chapter select a seasonal podcast where we bounce back and forth between a series exploring their evolution design and legacy and for season four

We're getting together with family because we're covering the fast and the furious

My name is max Roberts and I am joined as always by Logan Moore. Hi Logan family family family family family

That's my only exposure to this film series is the trailers and the memes.

That's about it.

That's all I know coming into this.

I'm so excited to bring you into the fold of the Fast family.

For the first time here on Chapter Select, we are doing a movie series.

We kind of wrote about it when we announced them a few weeks ago, but the idea is movies have a lower dedication of time which then is going to allow us to create a more ambitious season 5 which is going to be Resident Evil for the front half of 2023.

But the Fast and the Furious is special and if you've seen these movies you know how special they are.

But Logan, like he said, has never seen these movies except the first one.

I've seen them for Tokyo Drift.

Yeah, yeah.

And we'll talk about those in the respective episodes but I've definitely seen parts of Tokyo Drift.

I ever finished it and then I watched the first one last year I believe for the first time because I was like I'm gonna watch all of these finally and then I watched the first one and I never continued that journey so now we'll continue that journey in the form of hashtag content so yes but I have always wanted to share these movies with Logan I always thought it would be fun because he has little exposure to the the grandiose nature that is family I think what's funny is over the years every time I've told people that I've never seen these movies before they're always really really shocked by that because knowing we're not my friends specifically knowing how they know my personal taste they're like you would like these a lot why have you not seen them because you like very stupid things so of course you would like this and I'm I'm like, I don't know, just never got around to it.

- There are some moments, there's actually a video

I have saved for later in the season for you to watch, honestly, maybe after like the seventh movie or maybe even after it all, because it describes why these movies worked so well and it's just,

there are moments I don't wanna spoil for you that they're just lines and scenes

I know you are going to love so much.

- That's good.

I'm excited to watch all of these.

I'm excited that you're excited to rewatch all of these,

'cause this very much is the inverse.

And what's funny is we've already talked about how we're doing Resident Evil early next year.

That's almost a complete swap,

'cause I've played all of them and you haven't.

You've played a couple.

- I've just played a handful.

- So it'll be fun how we're going back and forth with our next two seasons here, with you being the expert in one and then me being the expert in the next one we do.

- Yes, and considering this is chapter select and we do go back and forth, we're not going back and forth for the Fast and the Furious. This was at the the request of Logan. He did not want to necessarily go back and forth from release order, a little narrative whiplash. So for season four here we are going in chronological order. Personally, I've never watched the Fast and the Furious movies in chronological order. I just watch whichever one I'm in the mood for or in release order. So that's going to kind of lead us into something that looks a little bit like this is The Fast and the Furious for episode one and then Too Fast Too Furious, Fast and Furious for episode three, Fast Five for episode four, Fast and Furious Six for episode five, then The Fast and the Furious Tokyo Drift as episode six, Furious Seven is seven, The Fate of the Furious for eight, so those kind to line up. And then we get Hobbs and Shaw for 9 and then F9 for the 10th episode. And then sometime in 2023, undoubtedly we would get together for Fast X. So eventually that will come out. Well that's in May at some point in 23. So you can probably bet on an episode about that down the line. But that is the order that we're approaching this in.

Does that make sense? I still do not understand how Tokyo Drift is like 7 or 8 movies in.

It doesn't compute with me. I'm sure I'll figure it out, but you will and it's yeah, that's gonna be it's again, it's so fascinating to me as someone who hasn't seen these, you're approaching it this way. It's gonna be fun to explore the movies this way because we both we both have never done it in this order. And I think that your insight as the story develops kind of this arch and then what you know, what I know from seeing all of them, it'll be fascinating for sure.

Yeah, I'm looking forward to watching a film series that has The Rock in it. I'll just say that. Because I have not seen many rock films now that I think about it. He's like one of the most famous actors in the world and I've never seen a lot of his movies. His Hobbs is iconic and the beef between him and Vin Diesel out here in real life is also iconic at this.

It's iconic, but it's so unfortunate for the implications later in the franchise.

So that's kind of where we're losing.

We are continuing our biweekly release like we normally do with the episodes starting on August 24th of 2022.

And then we're going to release every other week after that, taking us through the year and into 2023 where Resident Evil will be waiting for us. So without further ado, I say we, you know, grab a corona, get around the table, we'll say grace, and then get in our cars. I have one final question. Since last season was called season 3E, are we calling this season the fast and the - Nefarious?

- If we could come up with a better pun, see, putting it in the middle there, it's like chapter select, season four-ious, season, I don't know.

The chapter and the select.

- The podcast and the four-ious.

There you go.

- Something like that.

horrible, but this is

Yeah, it's on par with the films

Thank you all for listening. We're very excited to share the rest of the season with you and until next time adios
